Marine Le Pen was on the receiving end of yet another incendiary-accented insult from a French journalist this week, when she was asked by state broadcaster France Inter to explain the French flag. "Is it a swastika?" asked the journalist, before finishing his question with a Nazi salute. The journalist, who is seemingly an admirer of the Nazi occupation of France during World War II, has since apologised. He later said his comments were meant as a "play on words", and not a reference to Le Pen's political platform, which includes nationalist rhetoric and support for the far-right. The blunder was not the first time a journalist has attempted to mock Le Pen and her ideas. The European Parliament has even passed a motion criticising the “continued practice of using nicknames or denigrating words against her”. Marine Le Pen has also received such abuse before, notably for sharing a photo of Islamic State’s executions to her Facebook page. “Welcome to Raqqa,” was how the journalist who shared the photo described the Syrian city in an interview with France Info. The Front National leader said the journalist would soon “find himself in the street”.Q: use boost::mpi and mpi_alloc in C I need to use boost::mpi and its mpi_alloc in a C++ application. I would like to start with the lowest C level. I'm already using boost::asio with boost::threads and I need to use boost::threads as well. This is the way I need to use the standard C library and it works perfectly: std::vector
